ADDRESS: THE TRIBUNE, NEW-YORK.

The Joint Committee of the Aldermen and Supervisors agreed on yesterday to recommend to their respective bodies that the proposed extension of the Court House be construted of the same material as the existing building; that it be made fire-proof, and that the two wings be uniform in architectural design. A majority of the Joint Committee agreed to recommend the adoption of the plan prepared by Messrs. Snook and Chapman, although the Aldermanic Committee on County Relations proposed another plan. There would seem to be no further obstacle to an agreement, whereby the tax-payers may be allowed to retain possession and enjoyment of their own property. A movement has been set on foot, we understand, to postpone the further consideration of the business until after the fall election. Such a scheme can have only one meaning, and that is to try the whole question over again before the new board of Supervisors. Unless the matter is settled now, we trust that the voters will publicly interrogate the candidates on this question, and withhold their support from any man who fails to give an unequivocal and satisfactory answer.

THE NATIONAL LABOR CONGRESS.

The National Labor Congress, now in session in the city of New York, has done one good thing, and we wish the more have to record our approbation of it because we have not been able, generally, to approve their platforms and projects. They have declared the same wages for women that men receive for the same work, and have promised to assist themselves in all proper ways to enforce the demand. It is not many years ago that the claims of women to the right to work at all employments for which they have physical strength, were either coldly received or entirely repulsed by the "Unions." They have now come to their senses, and we promise them our cordial co-operation in this part of their work.

The congress has not yet developed its plans of political finance, but it seems likely to follow the lead of those the trio's who have been stirring from the bottoming of the world, to make the rich mighty in furnishing the public a medium of exchange. The theory of these persons is that gold and silver are the only "representatives" in the transaction of business, that "labor would be emancipated," as the phrase is, if the requisite amount of paper dollars were issued — as though a man could get any more of the necessaries of life by exchanging his labor for two bits of paper than for one, — both being intrinsically valueless. What the workingmen of their Congress is somebody to tell them about is what that of England would be if the House of Lords were abolished and the House of Commons made the universal suffrage. This is the "Progress" the party

THE GOLFAX TOUR.

Topography of Colorado.

True Source of Her Prosperity.

Agricultural Interests.

Editorial Correspondence of The Chicago Tribune.

DENVER, COLORADO, Sept. 15, 1869.

In this, the last of our letters to follow the tour of Mr. Colfax and his party, we cannot do better than to refer the reader to the series of Colorado letters in order that he may understand what follows. It will be necessary, however, to give a brief statement of its topography.

PRELIMINARY.

Neglecting Western Colorado, of which comparatively little is known, the middle and eastern sections of the Territory are widely different in their topography and agricultural aspects. In the central the earth's crust has been upheaved to from six to sixteen thousand feet above the sea, standing many miles on its summit. Pushed up in one long ridge or chain, it has drawn after it the strata of earth and rock which lie on either side, and these, in their turn, have drawn others, extending many miles from the mountains. The result is that the eastern slope of the range, with its foothills and valleys, is a succession of ridges, each, like parallel walls, standing higher than the one next to the mountains. Between these ridges are valleys, which, like the ridges, run parallel with the mountains. Each valley is bounded on the mountain side by the ridge next to it, and on the other by the ridge next to the plains. Each ridge, in its turn, is bounded on the mountain side by the valley next to it, and on the other by the ridge next to the plains. Each valley, in its turn,

CITY POLITICS.

The Great Republican Demonstration of Wednesday Evening.

Additional Particulars---A Statement Containing the Figures.

The Scandinavian and French Tanners.

Amusements, Vote, Etc.

The sights and sounds of the great demonstration of Wednesday evening have not yet died away. The impression made upon all who witnessed the outpouring and rejoicing of the people was too strong to be easily lost, and in many one yet bears the stamp and enthusiastic cheers; the everywhere prevailing sound of music, and the eyes as yet scarcely blinded with the glare of a thousand torches, transparencies and illuminations. We predicted that the grand parade would be the finest fully equipped Tanners, and the prediction would have been more than verified had the grand parade of colored Tanners who desired to come been disappointed in the lack of railroad accommodations. Thus, on the evening of the reception, the streets were not a foot full one thousand, while the number with which this pathetic and vivid scene could be accredited is only one hundred and fifty. A half a hundred of other cities and towns of the interior fired no better. But in spite of these drawbacks the demonstration was one that all good citizens may well be proud of. According to Copperhead conceptions, had the parade been a success, victory forever would have numbered at least 20,000 starved, ragged, miserable wretches. The Board of Police at the time of the ratification of the Tammany nominations, estimated by the Copperhead organ at 6,000, turned out by the Democratic Central Committee and by every ward's procession that he attended, that "numbers, outgrowing the Tammany Hall, would be compelled to adjourn to the open air." The Times in yesterday's issue makes a sad and lugubrious estimate of the "Democratic" turn out per se. We do not desire to add one hundredth to the column. The grain will be sufficiently large, if we make only one-fifth, or, in reality, considering all of necessary deductions, one-tenth of the number claimed by the Democratic Spoilers, so far as they could be counted. With the greatest will, and if there is a disposition to be in favor of a large figure, the Times ought to be able to count, at least, one-half of the total count, and given the total at 3,131; about two-thirds of the number claimed by the Democratic organ. To the encouragement with which the Democratic leaders take the work of not only an organization but a success of the Democratic party, the Times intends to be real candid, we hardly fancy. From our acquaintance with the editor and proprietor of the Fifteenth ward in the best organized and the most thoroughly drilled ward in the city, and the unanimity and enthusiasm of the last meeting of that ward, the Times gives the Fifteenth ward's quota for only 150, when the ward will be entitled to 300 votes. The Seventeenth ward, Mr. Ward, Democratic, is given but 200, when the ward will be entitled to 300 votes. The Democratic Central Committee
